TODAY IS WORLD HEPATITIS DAY

Across the globe, special attention is being given to increase the awareness of the facts about chronic hepatitis C (Hep C) and the seriousness of the disease. The silent epidemic impacts the lives of almost 150 million people worldwide, and 3.2 million here in the US. The good news is Hep C has not been forgotten. And neither have you.

HEP C CAN BE CURED

There's never been a better time to rethink Hep C. In the last few years, scientific advances have made treatment for Hep C shorter and more effective than previously, with the goal of Hep C treatment being to cure the disease. Cure means the Hep C virus can no longer be detected in your blood when measured three months after you've finished treatment.

World Hepatitis Day is an opportunity to learn more facts about Hep C, and be part of the movement to increase global awareness.
